Long Prepares for Vice Crusade Upon New Orleans Mayor

Sharpens Political Axe on Grindstone of New State Law

PEOPLE TO RESIST

Young Democrats Combat Vengeful Moves of Louisiana Dictator

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(P)—Senator Huey P. Long whetted a broad sword of reform Monday on the grindstone of a newly-made law and cast a hungry eye on the political neck of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

As soon as Governor Allen signs the 27 bills which the legislature passed last week Long has indicated he will begin an inquiry into New Orleans' vice and gambling.

The governor is expected to sign the bills before nightfall Monday.

Young Democrats Opposed

Long's program was denounced Sunday as "destructive of the fundamental principles upon which our government is founded" in resolutions adopted at Alexandria by the "Independent Young Democrats of Louisiana" at a meeting attended by representatives of the organization from each congressional district.

The resolutions of the Young Democrats in condemning passage of legislation which gave Louisiana virtually a one-man government, called "attention of the people of this state to the dire consequences of such legislation," and implored them "to use increasing vigilance to minimize these consequences by the selection of public officials who are opposed to the principles embodied in these laws, and who will use every effort to bring about their repeal and restoration of constitutional government in Louisiana."

An Ex-Salesman
Rising from the platform of medicine man salesmen in the sand hills of his native Winn parish, Long, a red-headed country youth, took a jump into politics as a champion of "the common people" against the "big city ring" and won a membership on the Public Service Commission. His showmanship made a hit with the crowd in politics and he quickly developed further political ambitions.

He ran for governor in 1924 but ended up third man in the race and lost as the old regulars pitched against him and waged a hot fight. In 1928 Long ran again for governor and came out on top in a three-cornered race and the late former Gov. C. H. Simpson with Representative Riley J. Wilson son. Lacking a clear nomination majority, Long was getting ready to run second high man, withdrew.

In a second primary when Wilson, Long went into office for a career in the legislature and advanced in which he overthrew his impachment to the United States Senate by rolling a paucity majority to offset opposition from the Old Regulars in New Orleans.

Long twice has threatened in a major way to remove the foundations from under the Old Regular organization in New Orleans. While still governor's platform and defeated Senator in 1930 he campaigned on a good Joseph E. Ruffalo who was seeking re-election with the help of the Old Regulars and other enemies of Long.

Then after the victory, as both senator and governor, Long threatened to cut off the credit of the city of New Orleans as reported through his State Banking Department. In this crisis, wealthy citizens underwrote city paper and officials went to New York to obtain credit.

$700,000 Bargain Voided

The "city ring" broke and the Old Regulars consented to an alliance with Long's organization and peace reigned in Louisiana for about three years. One of the bargains over the counter was a $700,000 a year gift to the city of New Orleans for street paving work from state highway funds. Long cut this off after the Old Regulars severed relations with him and he had a constitutional amendment passed in the regular session of the legislature this year to wipe out the deal.

Last winter the Old Regulars figured that Long was losing his grip on his country strongholds and the organization repudiated his leadership.

When Walmsley accepted the standard of the Old Regulars to seek election as mayor he also took the pledge. Long sought another alliance with Walmsley's organization in the

Monroe Waives Senate Race to John L. Wilson

Gives Hope Man 20 Consecutive Years Without a Defeat

PILKINTON-HARRIS

Thompson Gets Clear Majority—Runoff for Other Representatives

John L. Wilson became state senator from the 20th Arkansas district (Hempstead and Nevada counties) Monday noon when Luke F. Monroe, second high man, waived his right to enter the runoff.

Wilson announced he would be a candidate for president pro-tem of the next Arkansas senate.

Emory A. Thompson clinched one of the two Hempstead county representative posts when he obtained seven more votes than a clear majority.

The runoff for the other representative will be between I. L. Pilkinton, second high man who fell 75 votes short of a majority, and Willie Harris, third high man. The total vote for representative was 7,797, a majority being one fourth, or 1,924. Thompson received 1,849; Pilkinton 1,767; Harris 1,400.

In the senatorial race Wilson outstripped both his opponents, and lacked only 199 votes of commanding a full majority. The vote for senator in Hempstead and Nevada counties combined was:

Wilson 3,220; Monroe 2,144; Timberlake 1,373.

His four-year term as state senator will give Wilson control of a record in Arkansas politics—20 years of consecutive public service without defeat in a single election.

He has served four years as clerk of Hempstead county; eight years as county judge; and is completing his fourth year as sheriff.

Hitler Opposed by Only 10 Per Cent

Dictator Polls 90 Per Cent—Decline of 3 From Previous Vote

BERLIN, Germany.—(P)—Adolf Hitler Monday took cognizance of the one out of 10 votes which was cast in opposition to him in Sunday's plebiscite with the declaration:

"We must and shall succeed in winning over the last 10 per cent of the nation for National Socialism."

Hitler thanked the Nazis for Sunday's "glorious victory." In his proclamation Hitler said:

"The 15 years' struggle of our movement for power in Germany came to an end Sunday. From the leadership of the Reich down to the last rural official the realm today is in the hands of the National Socialist party."

10 Per Cent Oppose

BERLIN, Germany.—(P)—About 10 per cent of more than 43,000,000 Germans opposed Chancellor Hitler's seizure of the Reichspresidency, virtually complete returns in the national plebiscite showed early Sunday.

The final preliminary returns made public at 1 a. m. were Yes, 38,275,514; no, 4,278,808; invalid 871,596; total vote cast 43,425,918.

As was expected, Hitler's test of popularity was overwhelmingly favorable but the vote of the opposition was slightly higher than months ago when 92 per cent of the electorate approved his action in withdrawing from the League of Nations. Returns from key districts showed that Hitler's loss of strength was by no means uniform.

In the Palatinate, for instance, the yes vote was 96 per cent of the total compared to 96.7 last December.

In Cologne and Aachen however, the yes vote dropped to 83 per cent as compared to 89 last November, while in Greater Berlin they dropped to 81 per cent from 85.1 per cent.

In Wittenberg, the vote in support of Hitler slid down to 90 per cent from 94.6. In Hesse-Darmstadt, the yes vote dropped from 91 to 88.1 per cent while in Baden the yes vote was 88.4 per cent compared with 92.5 per cent last fall.

The complete unofficial counts in Berlin gave Hitler 270,541 fewer votes than he received in November, a decrease of approximately 1 per cent.

The figures for Greater Berlin: Yes, 338,532; no, 22,322; invalid 35,129. The total vote in Greater Berlin was 3,018,553. The nearness of the drive to get out the full vote was indicated by the fact that in Greater Berlin the total vote was 3,458,186.

Mercury Above 100 Degrees for 25 Out of Last 50 Days

Monday's Maximum of 102 Is Fourth Consecutive Day Showing 100 Degrees or Better

Temperatures in Hempstead county have risen to 100 degrees and above 25 times in the past 50 days, weather records at the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station showed Monday.

Fifteen days in August the thermometer registered 100 and better. The mercury climbed over the 100 mark 10 days in July.

Monday's maximum was 102, the fourth consecutive day for the temperature to exceed 100 degrees.

Starting August 3 the mercury went over 100 degrees for eight consecutive days. The mean during that period was 105, record August 8th.

The hottest day was July 24 with a high of 106.

Arkansas Hot Sunday

LITTLE ROCK.—Arkansas was the hottest spot in the nation Sunday.

Temperatures rose to 104 in Little Rock and to 106 in Fort Smith. Temperatures above 100 were general throughout the state.

Relief is promised for Monday forecasts. The Weather Bureau forecasts cloudy weather, thundershowers in the north portion and cooler weather.

Arkansas was the only state in the nation Sunday with temperatures over 100, according to Weather Bureau figures. It was 98 at El Paso and Memphis and the maximum in most of the Southern cities was well below 90.

The maximum at Kansas City which has reported some of the hottest weather this summer, was only 86 and it was 82 at Chicago, 78 at New York, 88 at St. Louis and 84 at San Francisco, consistently the coolest spot in the country.

Although the maximum here did not reach the season's record of 105, the mean temperature was 91, which was 11 degrees above normal. The temperature rose to 100 at noon and remained above the century mark until after 6 p. m.

Loans for Winter Feed to Be Made

John Kent Announces Plans of Local U. S. Loan Office

The Hope office of the Emergency crop and feed loan section of the farm credit administration has been authorized to make loans throughout this entire regional area for the purpose of planting winter grain crops, John Kent announced Monday.

This applies specifically to winter grain planted in the fall of 1934 and to be harvested in 1935.

Loans may be made in the maximum amount of $250. In the event that Hempstead county is later declared "drought stricken" the $250 loan may be increased to $400.

Farmers in this area have until September 15 to file applications for loans. Mr. Kent said:

"I ask the co-operation of the extension service and our county committee in seeing that these loans are made in the spirit intended."

"It is not the purpose of this office to make loans on crops or on lands not adapted, or where the general practice of growing such crops is not in conformity with practices approved by the extension service," Mr. Kent declared.

Soapbox Racer Costing $7 Brings Him Victory in Ohio

DAYTON, Ohio.—(P)—A soapbox racer which cost him $7 to build, Sunday finished a four-year college course for Robert Turner of Munich, Ind.

To the boy of 11 years the title that went with the prize "all-American soapbox racing champion," probably meant more, as he piloted his little four-wheel contraption ahead of 34 other and lesser champions in the feature event of a two-day program here.

More than 50,000 persons cheered him. Second place, which calls for a trip to a Century of Progress Exposition, went to Claude Alexander of Chattanooga, Tenn.

ST. LOUIS.—(P)—Henry T. Rainey, picturesque speaker of the House of Representatives, is dead.

Apparently on the road to recovery from an attack of bronchial pneumonia, he suddenly developed angina

Condolences from Robinson

VIENNA, Austria.—(P)—Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, was on a hunting trip when news arrived here of Speaker Rainey's death. In the absence of Senator Robinson, Mrs. Robinson expressed grief at Rainey's death, saying, "The speaker was one of our dearest friends."

pectoris Sunday night and died.

The funeral of Speaker Rainey will be held late Wednesday afternoon at Carrollton, Ill. The body will be cremated in accordance with Mr. Rainey's express desire. Funeral services will be held at the Episcopal church and burial will be at Carrollton.

The speaker's unexpected passing brought expressions of deep sorrow from political leaders in all parts of the nation.

The leadership of the next house is in doubt as the result of Rainey's death, but Representative Joseph W. Byrnes, of Tennessee, is prominently mentioned.

Served 15 Terms

Mr. Rainey became speaker of the House of Representatives after service in 14 congresses. He was a white-haired veteran of 72 when he was handed the gavel at the start of his 15th term in March, 1933.

He started his congressional service in 1903 and thereafter kept the Twentieth Illinois district in the Democratic column except in the Sixth-seventh congress, when he was a victim of the Harding Republican landslide of November, 1920.

As speaker, he was faced at the outset with the extraordinary series of legislative acts which marked the opening months of the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration. The national bank holiday, return of beer, the amendment to abolish the 18th amendment, the granting of powers to the president to slash government expenditures, abandonment of the gold standard, currency inflation, lay-off and a huge program of public works to relieve unemployment came in rapid succession.

So expeditiously did the national legislature push through the acts connected with these developments that some of the representatives began to murmur about "rubber stamp legislation," but Rainey, gently, and yet firmly kept them in line.

He was a big man physically. Towering over most of his colleagues, his wide shoulders were topped by a neck like that of a circus strong man and a massive head, crowned with a mass of silvery hair that stuck out in all directions from his hat in formal occasions. His square jaws held a big black pipe rigidly, but when he spoke his tones were soft and amiable.

Farming His Hobby

Rainey represented a farming district in territory once contested politically by Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas and was a farmer himself. He had one of the show places of the fertile Illinois river valley near his home town of Carrollton where he lived from August 20, 1860, and where he lived all his life.

Farming was not only a personal hobby of his, but a public cause as well. He dedicated much of his service in Washington to efforts to improve agricultural conditions.

Protest Shooting of Our Alligators

Hempstead Has Great Array of Wild Life, Say Scientists

The greatest outlay of wild life north of the Everglades can be found in Hempstead county, W. F. Shaw and Moody Lentz, St. Louis scientists said Monday after a week's survey in this region.

More than 40 specimens of reptiles, insects and mollusk were included in their collection that was shipped to the St. Louis Academy of Science for scientific purposes.

Many semi-tropical specimens of water fowls, turtles and alligators are here, but are being exterminated rapidly by the ruthless shooting of so-called sportsmen.

"On Red lake we found many alligators floating on the water. They had been filled with bullets. Pressure should be brought at once to stop this procedure."

"Arkansas will soon be in the same fix as Florida. When the supply of water life had almost vanished, the state passed a law against the shooting of alligators for sport."

"Arkansas has many specimens of wild life and the state should take steps at once to preserve it before it is too late," the scientists declared.

Films for Adults Only, Is Proposal

Sophisticated Pictures on Special Basis, May Be Compromise

NEW YORK.—A plan under which the more sophisticated films would be shown on a special basis, was disclosed Monday in a release of correspondence between Will Hays and Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, chairman of the Catholic Bishops' committee.

In a letter dated August 14, Archbishop McNicholas told Hays:

"One recognizes that there are legitimate dramatic values in life, affording themes of proper and profound interest in mature minds, which would be utterly unfit for the impressionable mind of youth. Those who have thought the problem through are convinced that many pictures should be approved for adult patronage, while others should be approved for general patronage."

"This was in reply to a letter of Hays' dated four days earlier, in which the Hollywood czar suggested, among other things, that if the reformers were going to have blacklists and white lists, they must get together on their signals, since some films are recommended in one community and condemned in another."

Hays told Archbishop McNicholas that the studio moguls have decided to decorate their new cleaned up pictures with an emblem and the prelate replied that he thought this would solve the confusion in the special lists, provided he reformers could depend on the emblem meaning something.

High School Must Have Federal Aid Says School Board

Application to Be Made at Once to FERA by City School Board

September 17 was set as the opening day for the city's public schools.

Unless federal aid is obtained, Hope High School will likely operate this year on a tuition basis, it was announced Monday by the school board.

An application for federal funds will be filed immediately with the state commission of the FERA, and until the commission takes action on the application, plans for the school year are uncertain.

The faculty list will be announced as soon as a decision is given by federal authorities on the application for aid, the school board said.

A big decrease in enrollment is anticipated if the high school must be operated on tuition, making it necessary to reduce the number of teachers employed.

The elementary school will function on as merely a normal basis as possible.

Paisley school will house pupils living west of the L. & A. tracks and south of Missouri Pacific tracks, north of the Missouri tracks but west of Hervey street.

Oglesby school will house all pupils living north of the Missouri Pacific tracks and east of Hervey street.

Brookwood will house pupils living east of L. & A. tracks and south of the Missouri Pacific tracks.

"Pupils who will be 6 years of age on or before January 1 must register before the expiration of the first two weeks of school."

Parents are urged to have their children vaccinated before school starts, if this has not already been done.

Textile Workers to Battle Against "Speeded-Up" Machines

NEW YORK.—(P)—The primary object of the projected general strike in the cotton textile industry, set for the last part of September, was disclosed Monday as a fight against the machine.

Francis J. Gorman, head of the research department of the United Textile Workers of America, described it as a battle against the stretch-out system, under which more and more speeded-up machines are assigned to the worker.

Stratosphere Bag Is Landed Safely

Belgian Scientists' Venture Successful—But No New Record

MARIBOR, Yugoslavia.—(P)—Prof. Max Cosyns and Nere Vandervliet, Belgian scientists happily deflated their huge stratosphere balloon in a cornfield near Kninje Sunday, their ascent into the lofty stratosphere pronounced a success. Their balloon came down gently Saturday night, to the amazement of Slovenian peasants, after virtually all hope for their safety had been abandoned.

No new altitude record was achieved but the two believed they brought down from the heavens data which will be of immeasurable benefit to science. All of the delicate instruments they had taken along at Hour-Havenne, 1100 miles away in Belgium, at dawn Saturday were intact. They had reported conditions of the atmosphere and the behavior of the cosmic ray up to an altitude of nearly 10 miles.

It was high, Cosyns admitted, but far short of a record.

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Doctor Find Smoking Affects Circulation.

Since it was found that cases of blood vessel inflammation occur more frequently among smokers than among non-smokers, more attention is being given to the relationship of tobacco smoking to the blood vessels.

Experiments have shown that smoking cigarettes will produce in the great majority of normal people under certain conditions a change in the surface temperature of the arms and legs. Moreover, it has been shown that, with many persons, slowing or even complete stopping of the flow of blood will occur in the capillary blood vessels in the finger tips during the smoking of a cigarette.

Investigators have continued their studies in this connection and have brought out some very interesting facts. They tested the effects of cigarettes on a number of confirmed smokers, using not only standard brands, but also special types of cigarettes without nicotine, mentholated cigarettes, and some made with ashless filter paper.

They also made special studies on certain people known to be especially sensitive to tobacco.

The investigators are particularly interested in the reasons for excessive smoking. Obviously, if the effects are unpleasant, one is less likely to smoke. They found that two elements are predominant in the desire for the next stroke, the first being the wish for the soothing, quieting effect, and the second a nervous disorder to do something with one's hands. The most immediate smokers who use from 40 to 60 cigarettes a day actually smoke less than half of each cigarette, indicating the nervous habit involved.

It is interesting to realize that the investigators found no appreciable difference in the average effect between standard and denicotized cigarettes. Neither was there any difference between mentholated cigarettes and those not mentholated.

With all the different brands there was a drop in the surface temperature at the tips of the fingers and toes, and in most of the persons studied a slowing and stopping of the blood vessels at the tips of the fingers.

Apparently the lack of symptoms noticed by experienced smokers under the usual conditions of smoking is not due so much to development of any kind of immunity to the poisons of tobacco smoke, but rather to some sort of control over rate and depth of the inhalation which keeps poisonous effects at a low level.

The work also seemed to show that nicotine is probably the most important of the toxic factors involved and that anything developed by the cigarette papers is not concerned.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Good Taste First—Then Children Will Learn Manners

Manners in children aren't important, or at least the gestures we like to call manners are not the criterion of all courtesy.

What is more important than manners, as such, is to inculcate in the child a certain sense of decency and good taste. And to teach them to like people and think of others' comfort once in a while.

Once a child has the right outlook, his actual gestures won't bother us much. It is quite as poor taste for him to act stilted and artificial before others, as for him to be rude and rowdy.

If all the chairs on the porch are pushed to the wall and Johnny has to go back and forth several times, he doesn't need to tip like a felon every time he passes in front of the ladies and utter an "excuse me" as though he were about to kill their pet poodles.

Avoid Unnecessary Apologies

When children get into the habit of saying, "I am sorry," every time they move, people get a bit tired of it. A child too apologetic, and unnaturally contrite is not attractive in the least.

Every boy and girl should be taught, however, that there are some kinds of rudeness that are rudeness indeed. One of these is, hinting. All children will hint occasionally, and we often can pass it by with a laugh, but it is well to have an eye on small chaps or their sisters when they carry it to extremes.

Then there is the child who chatters all the way through a movie, sits half way over on the next lap and won't keep his arms or body still for a second. Natural restlessness is to be expected but the child who shaves and chatters his way through a show is being rude. He can be the best "howler" in town, the quickest puller-out-of-chairs and the most contrite of "excuse me" parrots, but if he is a nuisance in a public place he does not know the meaning of manners.

Important Matters Listed

Real manners consist in a sense of fitness. Courtesy is a real asset to the adult and, of course, should be ingrained early. But so often essentials are overlooked for superficial things of no great importance.

There are other things to be ingrained in the really well-mannered child. Compare a spotted tablecloth to a neighbor's trampled flowers, a lifted cup to a stare at the unusual or the malformed person; displaying smug manners when guests arrive, to deliberately sauntering in front of a frightened driver or tossing a ball into the street to startle him.

Niceties are important but they are just that. Good manners involve deeper feeling and are better calculated to develop self-respect and the liking of others.

Polishing Up On Your Nails—Try These Ways of Applying the Liquid Polish

Nail polish, artlessly applied, is worse than no polish at all. Knowing this, the smart woman—one who prides herself on the appearance of her hands—considers a few do and don't rules when she goes about the final step in a manicure.

Wash off all cuticle oil or other cream before you start. Polish won't set on an oily surface. Dry the nails carefully.

Remember that there are two methods of putting on liquid polish. Try both to find out which is easier, quicker and more satisfactory for you, personally. First, on three or four fingers, move the little brush from one side of a nail to the other, being careful, of course, not to get any of the liquid on the little half moons. Then on the remaining fingers, try the other way, using downward strokes from half moon to tip of each nail. Before you've finished, you'll BOOTS RABURN, is and pretty, clever not to be jealous of the other members of her crowd at Larchbrook, fashionable New York suburb. SYLVIA RIVERS, richest girl in town, dislikes Boots and fails to ask her to a party at the yacht club. Boots accepts a last-minute invitation from Mrs. WATKINS, a socially prominent, to a dance at the club that same night.

Quite innocently, Boots is thrown into an embarrassing situation by HARDY WILMORE, one of Sylvia's guests, who had been drinking the night before. Boots is so sailing with him and, when she runs away, goes off in a boat alone and falls overboard.

This scene causes considerable excitement and Sylvia is furious. She maliciously repeats the story to Mrs. PERKINS, who asks Boots to resign from the juniors. Hardy calls to apologize to Boots. He asks her to "wait there" this evening and Boots, hurt and defiant, tells him she likes to go to "see there"—a questionable dance resort.

CHAPTER X

Sylvia flicked the ash from her cigarette. The hand holding it trembled a little. Sylvia wore a huge emerald on her third finger; against the sunburned skin it looked like an evil eye.

"I don't know what you're talking about," she said languidly. Isabel faced her squarely. The crisp red curls on Isabel's small head fairly crackled.

"I think you do," Isabel said sturdily. "Mrs. Fennell saw you that day. She sent for Boots. And now Boots is—is out," she finished, spreading her small fingers apart in an expressive gesture.

"And so what does that make me?" Sylvia wanted to know, with insolence.

"You know as well as I do, Sylvia Rivers," said Isabel hotly. "That Boots Raburn didn't do a thing in the world to do with Hardy's being tight that night. He'd had a lot before he arrived at your table. He had some more there."

"Am I denying that?" Sylvia inquired, squinting through smoke, smiling ever so faintly. "No, my dear, your little girl friend's big mistake was in going out on the boat with him—getting herself talked about. I," said Sylvia coldly and aloofly, "had nothing to do with that."

"She didn't go with him and you know it. They went out on the porch."

"And after that," Sylvia finished with a laugh that was like the flick of a whip, "after that she remembered nothing. Oh, I know that too line, I've heard it before."

Isabel sprang to her feet, flushed and deep.

"If you let Boots suffer for this you and I are through as friends."

"Dear, dear, how melodramatic the child is!" murmured Sylvia softly. "Come around some day when the other isn't so hot and perhaps you'll feel differently. She dropped her air at studied insolence and now spoke almost coarsely to the other girl. "Snap out of it, Isabel. I haven't a thing to do with this affair. If Boots has been indiscreet that's her business. Why, I'd be glad to talk to Mrs. Fennell about it—ask her to tell Boots another chance."

"You would? Honestly?"

"Yes, only that—that Boots went to the barn at night with Hardy, and John Fennell saw her there. It's all," finished Sylvia in a tone of gentle regret, "all over even this morning."

"I don't believe it," Isabel knew what Mrs. Raburn thought about the barn. Not that anything shocking had ever happened there—only, well, the latest girls in Larchbrook didn't go there, usually.

Strange Harvest

dry bread and rancid meat. Hardy, bringing out a flask, and running entirely true to form as the wild young man out for a night's gayer. Boots had hated all of it and had drawn a long breath of relief when at last she had been set down in her own driveway. But today everything was more horrid still. Instead of pouring out the torrent of sympathy and indignant championship she had expected, Isabel had come around with a stiff, worried air to ask if she didn't mind being left out of the autumn parties!

Boots made bolts and washed dishes with apathy. How different the house looked with Mother away! Nothing seemed to go right. Even the window shades were at crazy angles and no matter how she twitched at them they didn't seem to respond. Oh, she would get out of here, go over to the club and swim and forget her troubles.

SHE went along swiftly, swinging her bathing bag, humming a tune with an air of casualness she was far from feeling. On the veranda, a magazine in her lap, her eyes on two small figures in the sand, sat young Mrs. Percy George, one of the Raburns' neighbors. Boots liked and admired the tall young woman with the fresh color and the friendly eyes. Frances George had been an editor's assistant before and after her marriage.

"Hello, there," Frances put down the story she had been reading and beckoned to her. "I hear you're housekeeper. Come and have lunch with us today. We'd love it."

Boots perched on the arm of the battered wicker armchair. "I'd adore to. Sure you want me?"

There was something challenging about her tone and Frances George elevated an inquiring eyebrow. "What do you mean? Of course, we do."

Boots shrugged her pretty shoulders. "The old ladies are after my soap. I'm no longer a member of the Larchbrook Juniors."

"Oh, that!" Frances laughed cheerfully. "Well, I don't see how you stood it as long as you did. You'll be dead long enough."

"You don't understand," Boots went on with a sort of gay defiance. "I was asked to resign."

The young woman in the blue print frock frowned. "What do you suppose I care?" she demanded. "Tell me about it if you want, but it doesn't matter in the least. She rose from her chair at a shriek from one of the small red-suited figures. The boy-child was laboring the girl-child with a shovel.

"I must rescue Gwen from the fiend," she said casually, to the inter-secular of two ladies nearby, gossiping over their needlepoint. "See you later. Glow at one."

Boots went toward the bath-houses with her head held high. It gave her a lift to have the matter of her disgrace taken so casually. Maybe she wasn't outside the pale completely, after all.

But as she passed a group of young people at the showers several heads were turned aside casually. Judith Davlin, whom she had known rather well at school, looked straight through—looked beyond her.

"Come along," Judith said to some unseen companion in her clear, pleasant voice. She ignored Boots completely.

The girl went on to her cubicle, her heart beating fast, her blood racing. So it was to be war to the knife, was it? She would show them how much—how little she cared!

Boots bathed reddened eyes and straightened her tumbled locks. How could Isabel understand that her adventure last night had been a gesture of defiance, directed at her enemies. Why, the Daru had been a horrid bore. Couples revolved slowly in a smoke-laden room.

"Indifferent food, sandwiches with

"Really?" she said, disposing of Boots and cousin Marion all in one breath.

Twin Sisters Die In River Mishap

Little Rock Girls Drown When They Step Off Into Hole

LITTLE ROCK—Twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Moore, wading in the Arkansas river near where several persons have walked across in recent weeks, drowned Sunday while a younger sister tried in vain to save them.

The twins, Bessie Ann and Rebecca Elizabeth Moore, aged 17, with their sister, Isabelle, 14, and four other girls residing near the Moore home, went to the river soon after 2 p.m. while their parents were away from home.

Entering the river near the foot of East Sixth street, where they knew several youths had waded across it since it has been at record low stages, the girls walked downstream a considerable distance. The seven girls were somewhat scattered when Bessie Ann Moore stepped off into a deep hole.

She cried out for help as she went under, and Rebecca Elizabeth hurried to her. Both girls were excited and relatives said neither was a good swimmer.

As the twins struggled in the water, Isabelle Moore made futile efforts to rescue them. She sank twice but managed to reach a sandbar after it became that she could not help her sisters.

Some of the girls ran for assistance and a crowd quickly gathered. Several men and boys began diving for the bodies and that of Rebecca Elizabeth was found quickly by Eddie Loffer and was carried to the river bank by her brother, Virgil Moore, as the father reached the scene, witnesses said.

Tarantula, Spider to Meet in Fight

Tarantula Favored to Win Over Spider by Five to One

NORFOLK, Va. —(AP)—Plans were revealed here Sunday for a battle to the death between two poisonous insects whose bites often prove fatal. One is a black spider, which recently killed its mate, and the other a tarantula.

Isolated in glass jars, both insects are in "training" for their battle in the customs house, pending return to Norfolk of Major I. W. Truxton, customs collector. He will fix a date when the spider and the tarantula will meet before a small crowd he intends to invite to sit on the battle.

Meanwhile the spider and the tarantula are testing new holds, bites and punches on such harmless sparring partners as grasshoppers, non-poisonous spiders, horse flies and other prey placed in their jar.

Norfolk citizens look to the battle with anticipation. Bets have been placed, with the tarantula the favorite five to one.

January campaign and demanded that he be permitted to name candidates for certain important offices on the Old Regular ticket. Walmsley's men threw him overboard and Long tossed his own ticket in the field and lost. Brushing aside a wave of mass meetings engineered last spring by political foes when Long and Allen were burned effigy, the senator strode into the legislature, flanked by his guards, and shoved through a program described by his enemies as the "punitive expedition of Long into New Orleans."

His friends said that he never forgets a wrong and seldom forgives. He is a student of politics and its working from the beginning of that game.

While he was escorting O. K. Allen, then state highway commissioner, around in the country stumping for him in Long's campaign to pick a governor to succeed himself, Long told the crowd:

"Allen will be your next governor, but I am still going to keep the books." He sat Allen in the governor's chair and after he had made the country "safe for Long," the self-styled "King-fish" gathered his entourage and ceremoniously departed for Washington in a private railroad car and broke into the United States Senate.

TELEPHONE

In 1876 Alexander Graham Bell finally perfected the telephone. The first voice heard over wires was Bell's, when he called through his instrument to his assistant, "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you!"

At the great Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, however, Bell's exhibit was almost unnoticed. His problem was but half solved. He had his telephone, how was he to convince people they could use it?

Bell wisely left that problem to his father-in-law, Gardiner G. Hubbard, Hubbard and a group of friends hit upon the idea of licensing other companies to use Bell's patents. In exchange they accepted stock in those companies. This was laid the groundwork for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company of today, parent organization of the 24 regional companies, of which the Southwestern Company is one.

FOR YOU . . . Good Service at Fair Cost

Over more than 50 years of operation the fundamental policy of the Bell group, as guided by this parent organization, has been to give good service at a fair cost.

Behind it is our belief that in an undertaking planned like the telephone service for the long haul, what is best for you as a telephone user becomes in the end the policy that will bring us the sounder, more enduring success.

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE HAVE ASKED . . . What, exactly, does Knee-Action do the answer is

CHEVROLET'S KNEE-ACTION RIDE

Doubles
the pleasure of motoring

CHEVROLET
The best way to prove that Chevrolet's Knee-Action actually makes motoring twice as pleasant as before is to drive the new Chevrolet over all kinds of roads. You will find that the continuous jars you used to get even on smooth pavements are ended. The steering wheel is free of vibration. Back seat passengers are comfortable and relaxed. You can maintain higher speeds over rough roads that used to slow you down. You will find, in fact, that probably for the first time in your experience, every foot of every mile is equally enjoyable.

This fine feature is combined in the new Chevrolet with beautiful, luxurious Fisher Bodies, safe, weatherproof, cable-controlled brakes, the flashing performance of an 80-horsepower engine, and the great economy of six-cylinder, valve-in-head construction. This combination is exclusive with Chevrolet. Perhaps that explains why so many people are buying and recommending this extremely low-priced car.
